The Broken Cables—How the Matter

was Bungled.

[Correspondence of the Evening Post.]

St. Jonn, N. F., February 9.—The last hope of repairing the Atlantic cables, for this season, has vanished. During her last attempt, the Robert Lowe met heavy northern ice, and had her bow stove in. She is now repairing, and will return to England this week. It would be hopeless to renew the attempt sooner than the month of June. The whole matter has been sadly bungled. The steamer was not dispatched early enough after the first cable was injured, so that the season for such operations was gone before her arrival here. Worst of all, a matter of such international importance was entrusted to incompetent hands, who, when it was too late, had to be superseded and officers of the Admiralty employed. With ice and stormy weather to battle against, they had no chance of success. Let us hope the French cable will hold out till June. Then a new cable will have to be laid down from the spot where the injury occurred, about sixty-five miles from Heart's Content, so as to clear the rocky ledge which evidently has been the cause of the mischief. Should this be found impracticable, a cable us heavy us the shore end now is will be needed over the dangerous spot, so as to hold on steadily and prevent chafing. It is, evidently, not such an easy, simple matter as we once supposed, to maintain telegraphic communication scross the Atlantic. The greater the necessity, therefore for the shortest route by steamer—which as from Valentis to St.

FOREIGH. PRUSSIA:

Berlin, February 26.—The acceptance by the National Assembly at Bordeaux, of the terms submitted by M. Thiers and his associate negotiators is officially announced by the German government, the conditions are as follows: First, the cession of the province of Alsacc; second, the cession of the fortress of Metz, the fortress of Belfort is not included in the German claims; third the payment to Germany of an indemnity of 200,000,000 pounds sterling. The Germans are to retain possession of a portion of the French territory and of several fortresses, all indicated in the agreement, which has been concluded until the whole of the conditions are fulfilled. The German troops will enter Paris on Monday, and occupy the Champs Elysees.

ENGLAND. London, February 26.—A telegram from Paris states that a further prolongation of the armistice for a period of forty-eight hours is considered probable. The terms which have thus far been arranged are reported by well informed officials to be very hard and humiliating in their character for the French nation, and were effect has been made by the French. ating in their character for the French nation, and every effort has been made by the French plenipotentiary in order to obtain their abandonment, or at least their mitigation, but Bismarck has met all their appeals pitilessly and with a fixed determination to adhere to the whole terms, the fulfillment of which is demanded by Germany.

A dispatch from Versailles states that it is thought possible that the German troops may yet make the grand entry into the French capital, as formerly proposed, and no mention is at present apparent at German headquarters of abandoning the project.

La France newspaper states that the preliminaries have been signed by the authorities at Versailles, and are as follows:
First, the cession to Germany of the province of Alsace and a portion of the province of Lorraine.

of Lorraine.
Second, Dismantlement of the Fortress of Metz. Metz.

Third, Payment to Germany of the sum of two and one half milliards of francs.

The same paper also states that the armistice has been prolonged until Wednesday

From information 'received here it is sidered probable that the sum demanded by Germany as indemnity from France will be paid in bonds to be issued by the French government.

BORDEAUX, February 26.—M. Thiers and his colleagues in the Versailles negotiations arrived in this city this morning. The Assembly has had a long and protracted secret deliberation, extending upward of twenty-four hours, and it is reliably asserted that the body is now certain to ratify the preliminary terms already agreed on by Thiers and his congotiators, by a large and decisive majority.

Announcement has been officially made convoking the National Assembly, this evening, for the purpose of authorizing the signature of preliminary articles, providing for a suspension of hostilities.

Pension of hostilities.

VERSAILLES, February 27.—The conditions of peace have not yet been signed by the French representatives. Notice has been promulgated that the National Assembly will be allowed twelve days in which to discuss the peace articles.
It is stated on official authority that on Wednesday next two corps of the German army will formally enter Paris. The troops will be encamped in Champs Elysees, their line extending from the Barriere de l'Etoile to the Place de la Concorde and will remain in the city until the ratification of the peace treaty by the French National Assembly.

Laird Collier on the Social Evil. Chicago, February 27—Rev. Robert Laird Collier, of Wabash avenue, Messiah Church preached a sermon last night on the social evil. In the course of his lecture he said—I presched a sermon last night on the social evil. In the course of his lecture he said—I say fearlessly that every house of prostitution in this city can be closed, and kept closed. I deny their toleration as a foregone conclusion. I say to you, that sin regulated is a doleful commentary upon the power of christianity. Let the municepal law be stringent and lucid, so plain in its phrases and words that a way-faring man though a fool need not err thereid, and then a Council and Mayor who are above bribes and peculation, and we would soon discover that a thing which we have deemed so difficult to deal with, would lose all its monstrous proportions. There is nothing to do with prostitutes, but arrest them and detain them for reformation. These reformations should be conducted upon principles and plans the most humane, modest and beautiful, where hard labor would be the best detective, watching the wandering and evil imaginations, and keeping their minds from straying in paths of sin and shame.

WASHINGTON, February 26.—The Secretary of the Treasury has directed the Assistant Treasurer at New York to purchase two millions of bonds on each Wednesday during the month of March, being ten millions in all, and to sell one million of gold on the first, third and fifth Thursdays of March, or seven millions in all. millions in all.

[Special Dispatch to the New York Herald]

The forthcoming speech of Senstor Summer on the President's West Indian policy is creating great excitement in volitical circles. The Senator's friends in the Republican party have been advising him to abandon fils war upon the President, and several of them have warned him that his course will meet the disapproval of a large majority of the party. Summer, however, is tnexorable. The result of his speech will probably be his removal from the chairmanship of the Committee on Forcign Relations. The Republican Senators argue that it is alike unjust to the administration, and to the majority in Congress who support the administration, to have at the head of the leading committee of the Senate a Senator as hostile to the President as any on the Democratic side. Mr. Summer is not so sick as he has been represented in some of the newspapers. He expects to be out to-morrow, and on Thursday will probably make his speech in the Senate. He already talks of impeaching the President. [Special Dispatch to the New York Herald]

CUBA.

More Executions, Etc. [Special to the New York Herald.]

HAVANA, February 26.—A Cuban just returned from Puerto Principe reports that Ygnacio-Agramonte has recently executed six persons whom he suspected of a desire to return to Spanish allegiance. One of these was a mulatto woman, wife of a soldier named Jose Belle, who formerly belonged to the corps of Cornello Ponori. She was accused of trying to persuade her husband to surrender, and hung on the first of February, near the village of Los Panas. A man named Louis Argilagos, was executed at the same time. Colonel Bababidali, charged with their execution, by the Cuban court-martial, was ordered to bury the woman with her clothing on, out of respect to decency, and her property was given to her husband.

These facts elicit much comment as opening up new horrors in the closing days of the Cuban rebellion. The Spanish have never yet executed a woman for disloyalty, and it is not the least part of the surprise occasioned by the event that it occurred so soon after the virtual pardon of Madame Cespedes. HAVANA, February 26 .- A Cuban just re-

The Queen of Spain is rapidly recovering from her recent illness, and will soon be able to resume her journey to Madrid.

A terrible colliery explosion occurred in South Wales, on Friday. Fifty dead bodies have already been taken from the ruins. A New York World dispatch says that the English government has interferred at the last moment, and persuades the Germans to abandon their march through Paris. The troops will only pass through the open space on the south side of the city.

Lord Erskine, the British Minister to Athem has communicated to the Greek government the dispatch of Earl Granville, contending that the investigation into the Marathon may sacres is insufficient, and demanding a free inquiry, especially into the conduct of the official previously acquitted.

A difficulty has arisen between Spain and Egypt, caused by an insult offered a clerk of the Spanish Consul at Cairo. It was reported all the Spanish Consuls had quitted Egypt. The Madrid papers deny this, but state that they have been instructed to act energetically. The Spanish Government has sent to the Viceroy of Egypt its ultimatum. The reply of the latter is unknown. Several European powers have offered mediation between Spain and Egypt.

A Cheep and Speedy Divorce.

The Shubuta (Miss.) Times thus chronicles a very rich divorce case in that county, that for brevity, cheapness, and dispatch beats Chicago a long way. It appears that James Chapman and Jennie Williams, or James and Jennie Chapman, had "tuck up" with each other and had been living together as man and wife for a long time, and that Jim had got tired of the old woman, and courted Miss Linds, who promised to share his bed and board, provided he would get a divorce from Jinny. Jim, therefore, hastened to the office of T. H. Clay, one of Alcorn's colored magistrates, and offered him five dollars for a divorce. Clay pocketed the "five" and wrote out the following certificate of divorce: ing certificate of divorce:

"Miss Lindy, this is to certify that James Chapman and Jennie Williams have this day separated before me, and you and him are at liberty to marry when you will. T. H. Olav."

This is decided the cheapest and speediest divorce ever obtained in the United States, and we commend Clay to the patronage of all darkeys who wish to get rid of their old, dried-up wives in order to marry fresh and plump ones.

THE terms of peace have been con-Prussia and France, and peace will be concluded as soon as the French Assembly ratifies them. The German army will only enter Paris to-morrow, and will not march through the city.

SENATOR RAMSAY, the champion in the Senate of the attempt to abolish the franking privilege, has become heartsick from long striving with a froward generation, or rather with a parcel of selfish Senators who care for their own ests. He has concluded to abandon the bill abolishing the swindle, which was passed by the House, and to make no further efforts in that direction. The franking privilege costs the country at least two millions each year, the sentiment of the country favors its abolition, the House decided by a large majority to abolish it, but in the tace of all this the Senate refuses to lift the burden. Senator Morton is a conspicuous opponent of the proposed movement, as he is of all reforms in the government calculated to purify it and release the people from the bondage of politicians.

Some of these European nations can get up a quarrel in the shortest order. We went to bed last night with the profound conviction that Europe would be powers one would have thought of, Spain and Egypt. Some pitiful Spanish clerk to some pitiful consulate in Egypt was insulted, or thought he was, and Spain, anxious "to vindicate her honor," and baptize her new nationality in blood, has sent an ultimatum of apologize or fight. At least so says a dispatch. Spain is not in the best possible condition to go to war, and we doubt not but that the Khedive could make things lively with his new guns, disciplined army and American officers."

The advertising patrons of a newspaper have a right to know precisely what they are retting for their money. They have as much right to know how much circulation is given to an advertisement which costs them $10, as they have to know how many circulars or they have to know how many circulars or cards they are getting for a stipulated sum of money. And yet the subject of newspaper circulation is one upon which there is more downright lying done than upon any other subject whatever. So far as the Republican is concerned, nobody who has any business to transact in its columns need be in the least doubt as to what they are getting for their money. Our books are epen to inspection, and the exact number of copies printed and sold can always be ascertained. What we ask is, that our cotemporaries shall be equally ready to deal honestly with the business public.

A CERTAIN morning paper of this city which maintains a steady glow of gnorance, attained even by Cunningam only in accidental and infrequent thinks it an exhibition of "won otism" for another paper to claim that it has "followed the action of islature more closely than has ever one before." Those who know what the morning paper in question is and has done, will readily admit that ad of being an assertion of "ego-" for another paper to claim to have r, it is an exceedingly modest tension to a very slender merit. A which, as far as its inexperienced would permit it to assume the of anything, tried to play le," and allowed the House of ntatives to repudiate the State's for the unsurrendered bonds of and to decide that the holders sell the Wabash Canal for the remark, without any appearance p to this time, of having learn-d that it had been done, may be carly surpassed with very little Party Principles.

We illustrated on Saturday the indifference of our political parties to all considerations but those of their own advantage, by a little reference to the first precedent in our State history of an abandonment of law and well settled duty at party instigation, and promised to extend the illustration to-day. In 1857, when Ashbel P. Willard was still Lieutenant Governor, but soon to be inaugurated Governor, there were, at the opening of the session, three or four contested seats in the Senate. The Republicans had a majority (elect) in that body, and resolved to keep it by retaining as many of their contestants as they could, to "hold over" for the next session. It was rumored and believed among them that Willard had "settled it," that he would not swear in the Republican holders of credentials, and would swear in their Democratic METHODISTS will be glad to hear that contestants. That he was quite resolute partisan enough for so unscrupulous an act everybody knew, and that neither he nor the Republicans cared a copper for the rights of the rivals or the execution of the law everybody knew equally well. But even in that collision of resolute wills and unscrupulous tempers, nobody dreamed of the mad extremity of overruling the organizing officer's decision by a void appeal and rejecting regular and authentic credentials. That has been reserved for the cultivated included between the representatives of famy of a later day. The Republicans resolved to have all credentials duly respected if they had to resort to violence to defeat an attempt to disregard them. More than one went to the Chamber armed. The lobbies were crowded with partisans fully prepared for fight. There were pale faces and compressed lips in the south end of the Capitol that morning. If Willard had attempted to do what he was suspected of intending, there would have been a bloody fight. It is doubtful now if he ever entertained pockets more than for the public inter- the purpose attributed to him. He was never an able man, but he was never a cowardly man. What he did he dared to do in the face of all the world, and in the first moments after he was allowed a hearing, and Dan. Bearss had uttered his shrill defiance, "We're ready for you, sir," he said that he proposed to swear in those who held regular credentials, whatever their party, and as this was at once in accordance with the law and with the wishes of the Republicans, it ended the difficulty. But ended it, only to bring it up in another form at the end of the session. The leading contested case was that of Kline G. Shryock against Miller for the seat of the Fulton county district. Miller held it on the regular credentials, and was a Democrat. Shryock wanted it on the allegation that he had a legal at peace within a few days, and that majority of votes, and was a Republican. there were no existing difficulties likely The case went to the Committee on to make a quarrel. But, on getting up Elections, and in due time came back this morning, we find that another fight with two reports, each for its own man. is brewing, and that between the last two The case took its place in the order of business, with plenty of time to have cleared it out of the way before any vital legislation came up. But neither party cared half so much for indispensable legislation as it did for the chance of gaining or keeping one more Senator for for one dollar. 1859, and the Democrats fought off every attempt to dispose of the case, so that the session might end with Millerstill in his seat; and the Republicans fought as persistently to keep the case ahead of everything else, so that indispensable legislation must be reached over Miller's seat, either empty or with Shryock in it. The Republicans were strong enough to keep it between the Senate and the appropriation bills, but the Democrats with the help of Lieutenant Governor Hammond, were strong enough to keep it from being brought to a final vote. And thus, day by day, between the Republican force which held it in its order, and the Democratic force which resisted its decision, it forced further and further back all the vital work of the session, and almost at sunrise on Sunday morning, of the last working night, the Senate adjourned sine die, with the ap-

An interesting communication has recently appeared in the Boston Journal, giving the dates of the earthquakes that have occurred within the last two years. The writer says that of great and terribly destructive earthquakes only one each year have been registered as happening from 1800 to 1865. In 1867 and 1868, no less than eleven disastrous earthquakes involving the less of one hundred and 1868, no less than eleven disastrous earth-quakes, involving the loss of one hundred thousand human beings, are reported. In 1869 and 1870 twenty-five serious earthquakes occurred, but were not attended with as de-structive effects as those of the previous two years. These facts, it is argued, show that the earth has been passing through a period of terrestrial phenomena more remarkable than any which has been witnessed by the present generation, and that it is by no means certain that the end of the earthquake term has been reached.

The writer states that it the absence of well established theory of the internal stature of the earth, there is increasing evide for regarding tavorably the generally accepted that the earth's interior is a fiery in the state of the state

We Are Growing Old.

BY FRANCIS BROWN.

We are growing old - how the thought will rise

O, wide and wild are the waves that part O, wide and wild are the waves that part
Our steps from its greenness now;
And we miss the joy of many a heart,
And the light of many a brow.
For deep o'er many a stately bark
Have the wheleding billows rolled,
That steered with us from that early mark —
O, friends, we are growing old—

Old in the dimness and the dust
O our daily toils and cares,
Old in the wrecks of love a. d truth,
Which our burdened memory beau
Each form may wear to the passing
Each bloom of life's freshness yet,
And beams may brighten our later
Which the morning never met.

But oh, the changes we have seen
In the far and winding way;
The graves that have in our paths grown green,
And the locks that have grown gray!
The winters still on our own may spare
I he sable or the gold;
But we saw their snows upon brighter hair—
And, friends, we are growing old!

We have gained the world's cold wisdom now, We have gained the world's cold wisdom hot We have learned to pause and fear; But where are the living founts whose flow Was a joy of heart to hear?
We have won the wealth of many a clime, And the lore of many a page;
But where is the hope that we saw in time But its boundless heritage?

Will it come again when the violet wakes,
And the woods their youth renew?
We have stood in the light of sunny brakes
When the bloom was deep and blue:
And our souls might joy in the spring-time then,
But the joy way faint and cold;
For it never could give us the youth again
Of hearts that are growing old.

when you have slept you are not refreshed, and effort seems so necless and incongruous under this languid sky that the only advantage of waking is to sleep again.

There is a fat, stoffd contentment and satisfaction prevading the general mind. Ambition comes only in spurts and flashes. Wealth is not keenly sought; power drifts into the hands that think it worth grasping. An indolent obedience rewards usurping enterprise. At the sight of obstacles progress recoils into reaction. There is hardly energy enough to beget hypocrisy. Sloth snores cynically in beget hypocrisy. Sloth snores cynically in the shade, as unashamed as the unswaddled babies that sprawl about the doorways. Whether this state of general indolence should be charged to any specific cause, I leave Philosophers and politicians to decide for selves. me will affirm it is the climate, which produces like results all over the world; others will say it is the unsettled and uncertain con-dition of affairs, and the doubt of the future; still others will explain that there is no money here, no incentive to activity, no promise of reward, no intelligent direction, no personal

But I started to speak of the climate and its nfluence in restraining exertion. We have been here ten days, and whatever may be the cause, there is a feeling of satisfaction in re-maining in this ancient city. Its ruins have lost none of their charm; the air, enervating as it is, is still delicious; the heat is not op-pressive; the forests and plantations retain their beauty; and the habits of the people are still a novelty.

Those of us not officially attached to the Commission have spent the time in wandering about the city and its surroundings. One day walking around the thick and massive wall of masonry which surrounds the town, beside the parapets, along curtains, into bastions, through sally-ports; the next day visiting the officials of government; the next dodging into the old ruins, moss-covered and gray with years, where the lizard higes; now visiting the old convents, and chapels, and towers and palaces; then wan-dering lazily through the deserted streets, dering lazily through the deserted streets, where the lordly officers of Spain and France, and England strutted hundreds of years ago; another day making the tour of the shops, which are innumerable and interesting, and another mounting our horses and riding far into the interior. We have bathed in the surf of she sea, we have fished in the river Ozama, renowned in history; we have smoked our cigars in the vice-regal palace of Don Diego Columbus, or what is left of it, and also in the tower in which tradition says his father was a prisoner in 1500, and we have slept, slept soundly at all hours of the day night. Is it any wonder that we do not tire of this city—this, which was once called the City of Palaces, was once the metropolis of the American world?

The Deepest Hole in the World. We clip the following from the Missouri Republican: When we quit work on the artesian well near the insane asylum, it was admitted that the hole was the deepest in the world. The St. Louis hole is now beaten by one in the vicinity of Potsdam, which is drillone in the vicinity of Potsdam, which is drilled to a depth of more than 2,200 feet. Commenced with the intention of boring an artesian well, it now serves a much more interesting purpose. At a depth of 300 feet a mighty stratum of rock salt was discovered, which has not yet been pierced entirely at the immense depth of 5,500 feet. Other holes, distant several hundred feet, have been bored in order to ascertain the circumference of the salt bed, and everywhere salt has been struck at a depth of about 300 feet.

BOOK NOTICES.

THE DESTROYER OF THE SECOND EMPIRE; Being Napoleon, the Little. By Victor Rugo. New York: Sheldon & Company, publishers, 1870. Indianapolis: Bowen, Stewart & Co. This volume is a translation from the sixeenth French edition, by a clergyman of the rotestant Episcopal Church, whom we take to be a resident of Hartford, Connecticut. No matter what Victor Hugo may be now, in his econd childhood, it can not be denied, that twenty years ago, when this volume first appeared in type, he was a great author, and this one of his greatest works. The volume is filled with the scathing satire and exquisite thing. Call and examine it. Also take a look wit for which its author is noted. Not possessing the sensational and popular interest of lounges.
a novel it acquires dignity from its purely hisevents which he records, and a participant in acteristic French vanity, the book is valuable in an artistic and scientific point of view, containing as it does, passages of incomparable eloquence; being graphic and readable throughout, and presenting in the latter part a masterly analysis of crime. Many of its predictions have been singularly verified. The following, for instance, after predicting that Napoleon will become Emperor, Unside Down Nos. 49 and 53 West Washingdicting that Napoleon will become Emperor, he says:

"He will accomplish this. He willmake the human race shrug their shoulders; that will be his destiny. Will he be less vigorously punished on that account? No. Diedain takes away nothing from anger; he will be hideous, and he will remain ridiculous. That is all. History laughs and strikes him with a thunderbolt.

The historian will only be able to bring him before posterity, holding him by the ear. The man once stripped of success—the pedestal taken away, the dust settled, the tinsel and the glitter and the great sabre taken off, the poor little skeleton stripped naked and shivering with cold—and can one imagine anything more wretched and piteous?"

The events of the last six months, make the volume doubly interesting, to the student of history.

STEPS UPWARD. By Mrs. Frances Dana Gage, author of "Elsie Magoon," "Gertie's Sacrifice," etc. Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co., publishers, 1871. Indianapolis: Bowen, Stewart &

This story originally appeared in the Temperance Patriot, where it was published as a serial. Meeting unexpected success, its friends, believing that it might accomplish great good in the cause of temperance, advised its publication in book form, which has been very greenfully done. It is simply a great good in the cause of temperance, survised its publication in book form, which has been very successfully done. It is simply a good temperance story written in a pleasing, readable style and designed both as a warning to the young, and as an encouragement to the weak, the struggling and the doubting in the great life battle with appetite and temptation. The heroine of the story is the daughter of a poor day laborer, who is cursed with a drunken father but who with steady and determined perseverance, takes those little but sure steps upward, undismayed by trials and obstacles that would have discouraged many another, until she attains the good for which she set out. It is only a straightforward story of common lives full of the ordinary success and failures of common life. The denouement is not startling, neither does it recount terrible tragedies or unheard of coincidences. It is a book, however, that will interest the general reader, and teach him lessons that it is well to know. It is one of the best of its kind.

New maple sugar, lettuce and onions, are now in the market, reminding us of the approaching spring time.

All, on Indiana avenue, Wednesday evening Many of the readers of The News are undoubtedly already acquainted with this volume, as it was published two or three years ago. The fact of the author's having been in the city this winter, engaged in the organization of Women's Missionary Societies, will have created a new interest in the book, hence our object in noticing it. It is strictly what its title indicates, a story of Christian discipline. Imaginary characters are created and made to pass through all the trials and vicissitudes which cross the Christian's narrow pathway, until at last, having been faithful to their sacred trusts, their hopes are crowned with bright fruition. As a religious romance, the book is a very good one. the book is a very good one.

THE SHADOW OF MOLOCH MOUNTAIN. By Jane G. Austin. New York: Sheldon & Compa ny, publishers, 1871. Illustrated. Indianapolis Bowen, Stewart & Co. Frice, $100.

ny, publishers, 1871. Illustrated. Indianapolis: Bowen, Stewart & Co. Frice, $1 00.

This is a work of no little merit, and displays a talent for originality of thought and accuracy of description which will eventually place the writer among the first novelists of the day. She has already become somewhat noted as the author of "Cipher," which was written as a serial for the Galaxy. The plot, as such, is not very remarkable, but the descriptive part is attractive, and in some places beautiful. There is a quaint vein of humor running through all, that she puts in the mouths of her characters, which renders the story intensely interesting, and compensates for what is lacking in the dramatic part. A delicately touched theology gives a dainty tinge of morality to the story, which adds to the smooth finish of the book. The illustrations are much finer than those which are commonly found in works of this kind. As a whole the book is well worth a perusal.

COUNSEL TO A MOTHES. By Pye Henry Chavase. Philadelphia: J. B Lippincott & Co. publishers. 1871. Indianapolis: Bowen, Stewart & Co. Price, $1 50.

This is a continuance and completion of "Advice to a Mother on the Management of her Children," which achieved considerable popularity in London, where it was first published, but which would have fallen still-born in this country, on account of the unexampled egotism of its author. "Counsel to a Mother" is of the same style. If one can get over the nauseating English egotism and off-recurring capital "I" successfully, he may find considerable of valuable information concerning the rearing of children, otherwise not, for he would throw the book down is disgust. The author attempts to be remarkably lucid, by repetition after repetition, detail after detail until the reader becomes wearied out by hope deferred. We are inclined to think that Pye Henry Chavasse, as a baby tender, is a greater success than as an author.

The Young spanish Ring.

A Madrid correspondent of the New York Herald, writing of date January 28th, asystiking Amadeus is doing all that can be done to win the hearts of the people. He left large suiths of shoney to different charitable institutions in the towns he stopped at on his way to Madrid; gave $6,000 to be distributed to the poor on his arrival at the city, $6,000 among the familiary exort carriving. Besides this he is almost daily responding to begging petitions in a most liberal manner. If money can purchase the sympathies of a people, Amadeus will soon be popular here.

There is yet miret that takes wonderfully with the people. The new King has abolished the usual military exort and in his rides only takes an equery and one of the sides. He was also both for and spanish time, which has not been a little. He has visited nearly all the theaters from the Opera House to the lowest play house, where the admission fee is four contact, and which, it view of the country and the lowest play house, where the admiss of the coming elections, is no doubt a wise policy.

As a general rule he drops in at the theaters without any previous notice of his intention, accompanied only by a minister, a general or one of his aides de-camp, and only remains to witness one or two acts of the piece played. He retires to rest early, and is generally up by seven in the morning. I am told that he is a great newspaper reader, and is very particular with the opposition papers, reading them most carefully, while the ministerial ones he merely glances over and throws aside. them most carefully, while the ministerial ones he merely glances over and throws aside. He is a young fellow, but up to the present time has given evidence that he thoroughly understands his business. The newly planted dynasty may possibly take root and last for some time, notwithstanding the many prophecies here about Amadeus sharing the fate of General Prim, or having to return to "la bella Italia" before the year is out.

A scientific journal describes the process of making artificial ivory from rubber: Two pounds of pure zubber are dissolved in thirty-two pounds of chloroform, and the solution is saturated with a current of ammonia, when the rubber has been completely bles ed, the admission of the gas is interrup ed, the admission of the gas is interrupted, and the mass is transferred into a vessel provided with a stirrer, in which it is washed with hot water until the bleaching agent has been entirely removed. During this operation, the temperature may be increased to 185 deg. Fahr., in order to evaporate the chloroform, which, by conducting it into an apparatus of condensation, may again be made use of. The remaining product forms a kind of a froth, which being pressed out, dried and again treated with a small quantity of chloroform, is finally obtained as a consistent paste. This paste is now mixed with a sufficient quantity of finely pulverised phosphate of lime, or carbonate of sinc, until it assumes the appearance of moist flour. In this condition it is pressed in hot moulds, which it leaves anticiently hard to be turned, planed, filed and bored. In order to imitate corals, pearly, enamels, hard woods, etc., it is only necessary to mix the paste with the desired color previously to its being compressed.

Celestials at Sunday School.

Scribner's Monthly for March has an article on "The Celestials at Sunday School" in North Adams, Massachusetts, by James L. Bowen, showing that the Heathen Chinese can be Americanised. Here is a description of the scene: The school room is some thirty feet in length by half the width, and ten tables, five upon each side, are already surrounded by teachers and pupils. It is now half past four, and school has just commenced. Upon one side of the room a number of gas jets give an uncertain light, while the other tables are illuminated by lamps, candles, whatever may be impressed for service.

Each table has from four to six of the yellow skinned pupils, all dressed in their best, quite a number of them appearing in neat black suits of the latest American style. There are nearly an equal number of teachers, very few having more than two. And here the usual experience of schooling is reversed. The Celestials are all young men, of small stature, and to the stranger appear quite as much alike and to the stranger appear quite as much alike as so many peas. There is the greatest diver-sity among the teachers.
